Korean Catholic History

The Joseon Dynasty begins

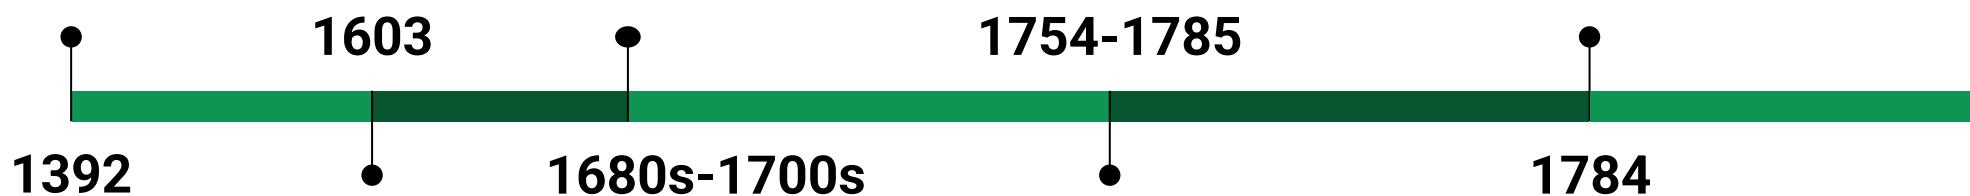

The Joseon Dynasty lasts for 500 years and is the first great enemy and persecutor of Korean Catholics.

Catholicism keeps spreading

Silhak and Catholic scholars share texts that spread Catholic teachings.

Yi Seung-hun is first baptized

Yi Seung-hun is baptized in Beijing by Chinese Jesuit missionary. He is the first Korean layperson and starts lay-led Korean church.

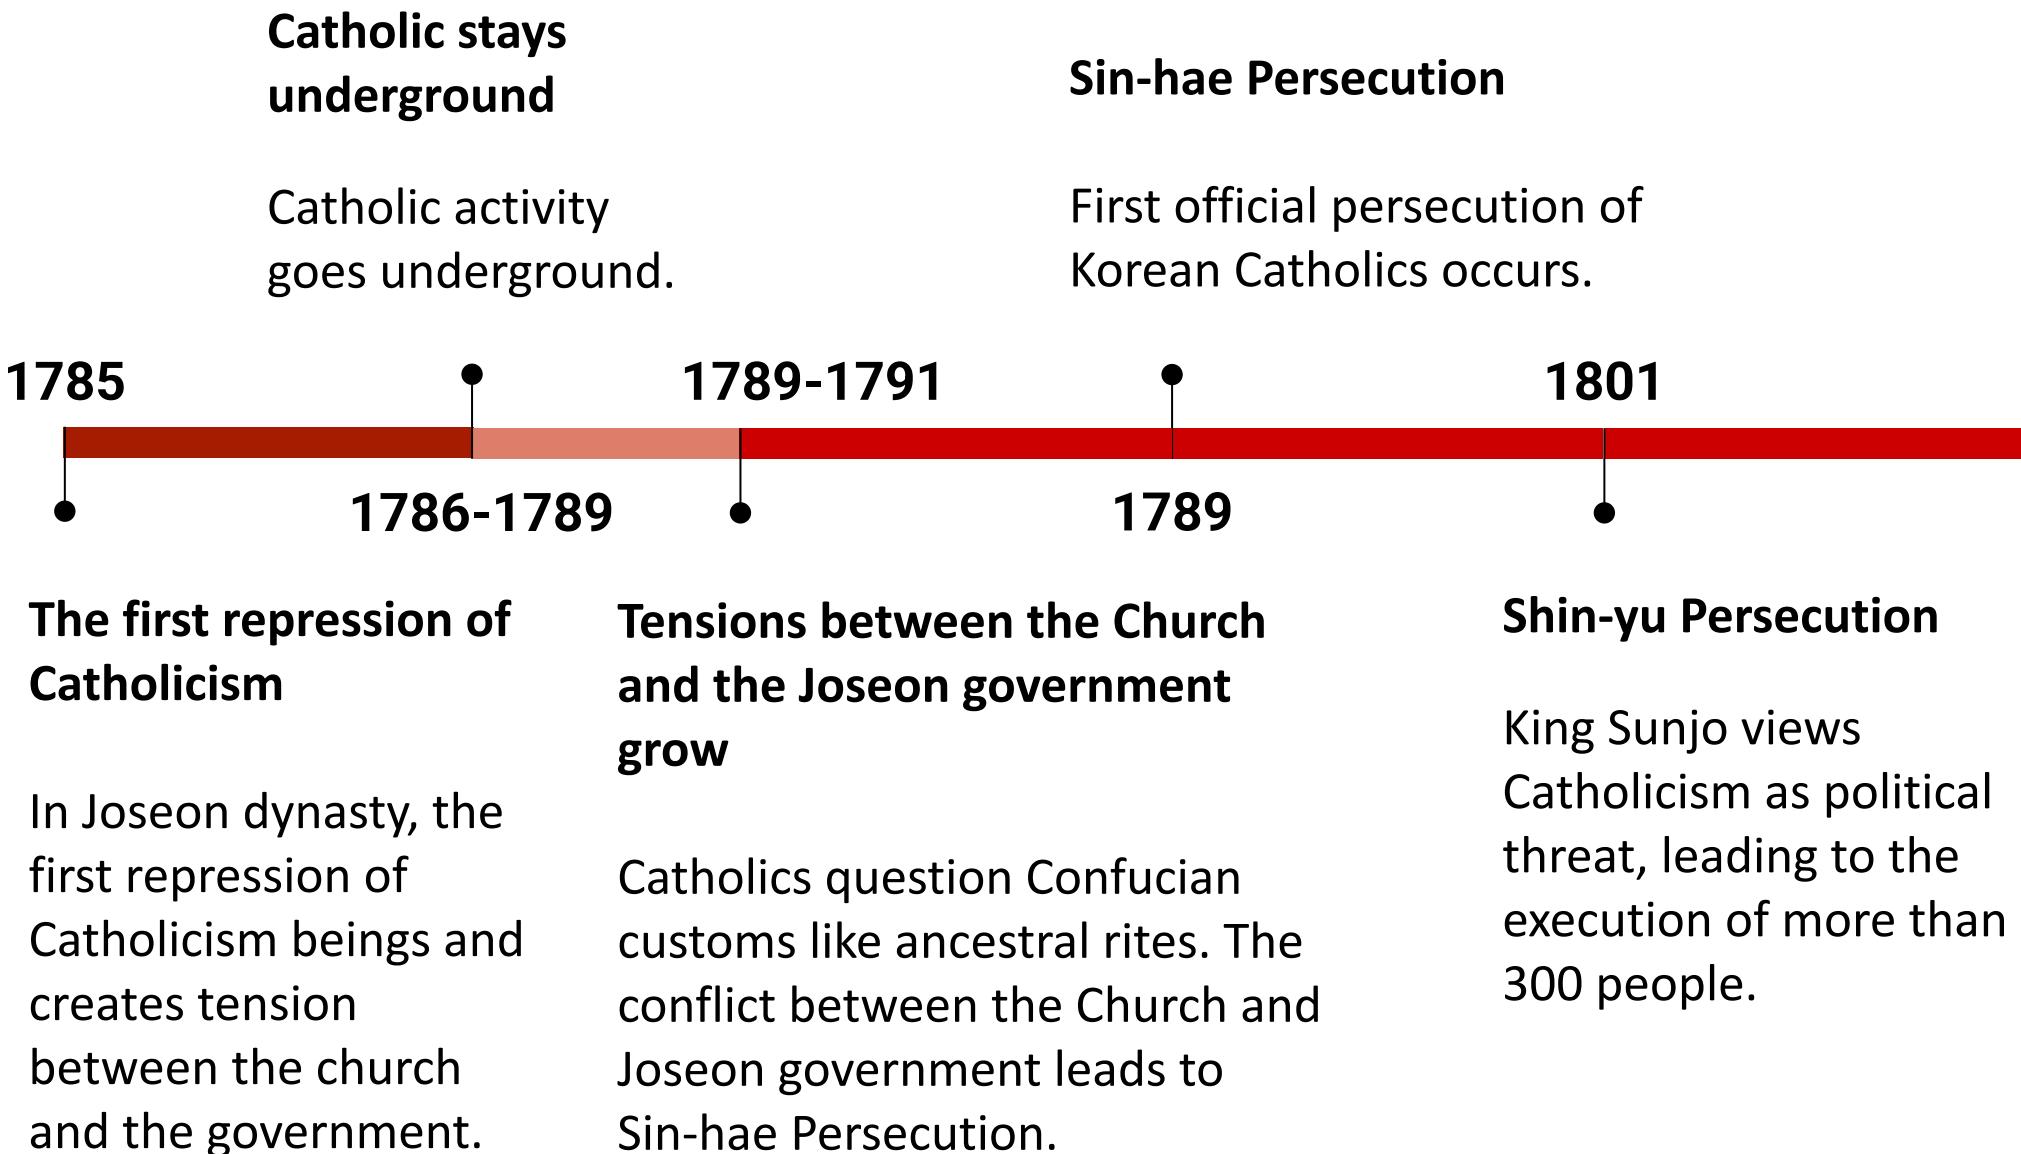

Catholicism is introduced

Catholicism is first introduced to Korean scholars through books, not by missionaries.

Yi Byeok forms the first Korean Catholic community

Yi Byeok gathers a group of intellectuals and scholars who nurture future Catholic leaders such as Yi Seung-hun.

Byeong-oh Persecution

During the Byeong-oh Persecution, St. Andrew Kim Taegon—the first Korean Catholic priest—is executed at age 25, later canonized by Pope John Paul II in 1984 with 102 other martyrs.

France-Korea Treaty of Amity

The France-Korea Treaty of Amity legalizes Catholicism in Korea, ended formal state persecution, and allows French missionaries to practice their faith freely.

Gi-hae Persecution

Under King Heonjong, the Joseon government executes around 300 Catholics as part of an ongoing campaign to suppress Catholicism amid fears of foreign influence and social disruption.

Byeong-in Persecution

Under Heungseon Daewongun, over 8,000 Catholics are executed in the deadliest persecution in Korean history.

Japan occupies Korea

On August 22, 1910, Japan occupies Korea, ending its sovereignty and imposing colonial rule, while tolerating Catholicism under strict surveillance to appear modern.

Joseon Dynasty

The Joseon Dynasty was established in 1392 and lasted for a little over 500 years between 1392-1897. The Joseon Dynasty was the last and longest ruling Korean dynasty. Joseon was a Confucian state, with Neo-Confucianism as the official ideology. The Joseon Dynasty believed that Catholicism was a threat to their social order and that it directly contradicted core Confucian values.

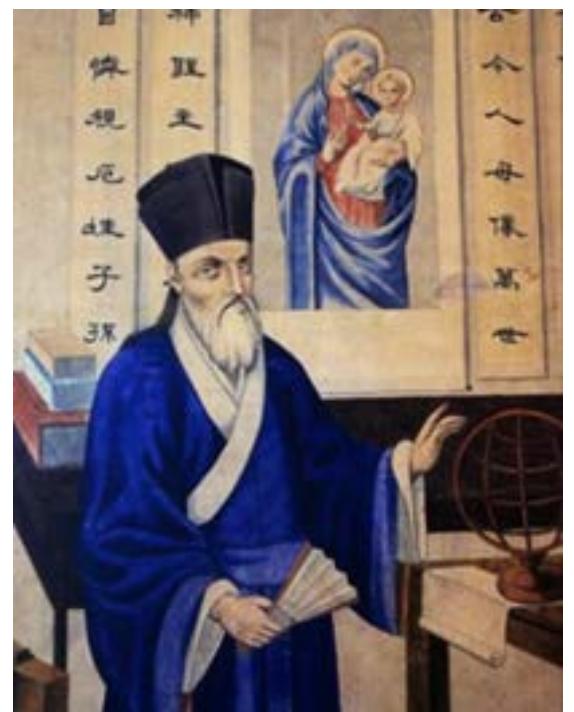

Catholicism Began with the Laypeople

Korean Catholicism began in a truly unique way: it was introduced by Korean scholars who discovered Catholic writings through books by Chinese missionaries not by foreign priests or missionaries

Matteo Ricci

Matteo Ricci (1552-1610) was a Jesuit missionary in Ming China. Matteo's book, Tianzhu Shiyi, "The True Meaning of the Lord in Heaven," was his most influential text that presented Christian theology in Chinese. His book inspired Korea's earliest Catholic intellectuals such as Yi Byeok.

1603 Catholicism was first introduced to Korea through Korean scholars, not by foreign missionaries. Yi Gwang-jeong, a Korean scholar, brought Catholic books and Westerns texts from Beijing to Korea.

1680s – 1700s Silhak was a practical learning movement in late Joseon that emphasized empirical study, reform, and practical solutions to social, economic, and political problems over rigid Confucian tradition. Silhak scholars began studying Western texts that contained Catholic theological ideas. Silhak and Catholic scholars often belonged to the same elite networks and family lineages. These scholars shared texts, hosted gatherings, and created intellectual circles that spread Catholic teachings, especially among the yangban (nobility) and educated commoners.

1754-1785 Yi Byeok was a leading intellectual figure in the formation of first Korean Catholic community. He reportedly experienced a spiritual conversion through study alone, before anyone in Korea was baptized. He gathered a group of friends and intellectuals to study Catholicism and formed the first Catholic community in Korea. He played a key role in introducing the faith to others like Yi Seung-hun.

Yi-Seung-hun

1784 Yi Seung-hun was the first Korean Catholic convert, baptized in Beijing in 1784 by a Chinese Jesuit missionary. He took the Christian name “Peter.” He became the first Korean layperson baptized into the Catholic Church. Yi Seung-hun helped spread Catholicism to Korea as a layman that began a lay-led Korean Church. Yi performed baptisms and helped Catholicism spread from person to person, starting with a small group of intellectuals and relatives. He converted not just fellow scholars, but entire families.

1785 The first official repression of Catholicism began in Korea.

By 1785 the Joseon officials viewed Catholicism as a threat. Thomas Kim Beom-u hosted Catholic gatherings at his residence in Seoul's Myeongdong district, which led to increased surveillance of Catholic activities and growing tension between the Church and the state.

1786-1789 Catholic activity went underground.

Despite persecution risks, communities continued to gather for prayer, catechesis, and discussion of Catholic doctrine. Catholicism spread quietly among scholars and some commoners despite growing suspicion.

1789-1790 Catholics began to question Confucian tradition such as ancestral rites, leading to intensified conflict with the state.

Catholic rejection of ancestral rites became increasingly visible. Korean Catholics asked the Beijing bishop whether Confucian rites were acceptable. The bishop responded negatively in 1791 and this deepened the Church-state conflict and led to the 1791 Sinhae Persecution- the first to include executions.

1791 Sin-hae Persecution The Sin-hae

Persecution was the first official execution of Korean Catholics and a critical turning point in the history of the Korean Church. It marked the moment when Catholicism shifted from being a quietly tolerated intellectual movement to a criminalized and persecuted religion under Joseon law. Two Catholics, Yun Ji-chung and Kwon Sang-yeon refused to perform ancestral rites due to their loyalty to God and not idolatry. Yun and Kwon were beheaded in Jeonju in November 1791. This marked the first execution in Korean Catholics history and sent a signal throughout Korea that Catholicism was now a punishable crime.

1801 Shin-yu Persecution By 1801, Catholicism had spread widely among scholars, officials, and even members of the royal family. King Sunjo viewed the faith as a political threat that undermined social order. Hundreds of believers were arrested, tortured, exiled, or executed as the government launched a nationwide crackdown. The first foreign priest for the Korean diocese, Fr. Zhou Wen-mo, and other foreign priests were killed, and subsequent foreign clergy were banned, forcing Korean Catholics to practice in secret. The persecution severely impacted the Korean Church. Whang Sa-Yeong lamented, “The Korean church, now, cannot survive any longer even without further persecutions.” Despite being outlawed, Catholicism persisted and grew underground, and many martyrs of 1801 were later canonized by the Church.

1839 Gi-hae Persecution

The Gi-hae Persecution, lasting from March to October 1839 (lunar calendar), was part of a series of campaigns by the Joseon government under King Heonjong to eradicate Catholicism, which it viewed as a threat to social order. Despite earlier persecutions, Catholicism continued to grow underground, particularly among peasants, scholars, and some officials. Political power struggles between the Pungyang Jo and Andong Kim families, along with local corruption, also fueled the crackdown. 70 victims of this persecution were included in 103 saints of Korea, including:

1. St. Ignatius Kim Chejun (St. Andrew Kim Taegon's father)
2. St. Paul Chong Hasang (lay leader)
3. St. Agnes Kim Hyo-ju and St. Columba Kim Hyo-im
4. Three French missionaries:
 - a) St. Laurent-Joseph Imbert (Bishop)
 - b) St. Jacques-Honore Chastan
 - c) St. Pierre Philibert Maubant

St. Laurent-Joseph Imbert (Bishop)

1846 Byeong-oh Persecution

The Joseon government targeted Catholics for their perceived opposition to Confucian ideals, particularly ancestral rites. Thirteen months after his ordination, St. Andrew Kim Taegon, the first Korean Catholic priest, was captured and tortured in an attempt to make him renounce his faith. He was arrested at Deungsanjin, Sunwido, while contacting a Chinese ship to open a new nautical route for missionary work. Fr. Andrew Kim Taegon, along with Hyeon Seok-Mun, was executed, while Lim Chi-Baek and others were beaten to death. His last words were, "It is for Him that I die. My immortal life is on the point of beginning." He was beheaded on September 1846 at the age of 25. His martyrdom became a major symbol of faith and resilience in Korean Catholic history, and he was later canonized by Pope John Paul II in 1984, along with 102 other Korean martyrs.

St. Andrew Kim Taegon

1866 Byeong-in Persecution, the Deadliest Persecution

The persecution began in 1866 (the 8th year of King Gojong) and continued until 1873, when Heungseon Daewongun resigned from political power. Catholicism, viewed as a threat to the traditional Confucian hierarchy and social order, faced widespread suppression. This campaign became the deadliest and most brutal persecution of Catholics in Korean history:

- 8,000 Catholics were executed, including both native believers and foreign missionaries.
- It marked the bloodiest religious persecution in Korean history.
- Among the martyrs were Bishop Siméon-François Berneux and other members of the Paris Foreign Missions Society (MEP)

Bishop Siméon-François Berneux

1886 Catholicism Legalized after France-Korea Treaty of Amity

On June 4, 1886, France and Korea signed the Treaty of Amity, establishing diplomatic and commercial relations. The treaty protected French missionaries, ended formal state persecution of Catholics, and allowed Catholicism to spread more freely in Korea.

1910 Japan Occupied Korea

on August 22, 1910 through a treaty signed by a pro-Japanese official, officially incorporating Korea into the Japanese Empire. The occupation marked the formal end of Korea's sovereignty and its transformation into a Japanese colony. Japan's colonial rule involved efforts to suppress Korean culture, language, and history, including forced name changes and the banning of the Korean language in schools. Japan tolerated Catholicism as part of its effort to appear modern and civilized on the world stage. Catholic Church operated under strict Japanese surveillance.

1945 Korea Liberated after WWII.

After Korea's liberation from Japan in 1945, Catholicism entered a new era of freedom and growth. Catholic Church re-established openly in South Korea. After years of forced Shinto workshop and cultural suppression by Japan, Catholics could now worship freely, use Korean language in liturgy and education, reopen and expand Catholic schools, churches, and seminaries.

Saenamteo Martyrs' Shrine

Saenamteo is located on the north bank of the Han River in Seoul, South Korea. Saenamteo is a place where the Joseon dynasty used to execute political offenses. It is most famous as the place of execution of Catholic martyrs during four anti-Catholic persecutions in the 19th century occurring in 1801, 1839, 1846, and 1866. The victims included Korean, French, and Chinese priests and missionaries and laypeople.

Fr. Zhou Wen-mo (James) was the first martyr of Saenamteo in May 31, 1801 during Shin-yu Persecution in Korean history. In 1893 during Gi-hae Persecution Fr. Imbert, the second archbishop of the Joseon Diocese also died with Fr. Maubant and Fr. Chastan in Saenamteo. Increasing oppression on Catholicism such as Byeong-oh (1946) and Byeong-in (1866) persecutions, brought about a series of martyrs: the first Korean priest, Fr. Andrew Kim Taegon, Hyeon Seok-Mun (Charles), the fourth archbishop Fr. Berneux, Fr. Bretenieres, Fr. Beaulieu, Fr. Dorie, Fr. Petitnicolas, Fr. Pourthie, Jeon Ui-Bae (Mark), and U Se-Yeong (Alexio). The Korean Catholic Church designated Saenamteo as a martyrs' shrine in 1950.

Prayer to St. Andrew Kim Taegon, Paul Chong Hasang, and Companions

O God, who have been pleased to increase your adopted children in all the world, and who made the blood of the Martyrs
Saint Andrew Kim Taegon and his companions a most fruitful seed of Christians, grant that we may be defended by their help and profit always from their example.
Through our Lord Jesus Christ, your Son, who lives and reigns with you in the unity of the Holy Spirit, one God, forever and ever.

Amen.

*"This is my last hour of life, listen to me attentively:
if I have held communication with foreigners,
it has been for my religion and for my God.
It is for Him that I die.
My immortal life is on the point of beginning.
Become Christians if you wish to be happy after death because God has eternal chastisements in store for those who have refused to know Him."*

- The last words of St. Andrew Kim Taegon

103 Saint & 124 Blessed Korean Martyrs

103 Korean Saint Martyrs

Catholicism entered Korea in 1603, introduced by Korean scholars who had encountered it in China. The faith spread quickly, but conflicted with Confucian traditions, especially ancestral rites. The Joseon government viewed Catholics as a threat to social order and loyalty to the state. As a result, waves of persecutions led to thousands of deaths.

79 martyrs during the Gi-Hae and Byeong-oh Persecutions were beatified to the blessed in 1925, and 24 martyrs from Byeong-in Persecution became blessed in 1968. Finally, the 103 martyrs were canonized to the sainthood in 1984.

The group of 103 canonized martyrs consists of 93 Korean lay people and 10 French missionaries. This includes 10 Clergies - both Korean and French priests such as St. Andrew Kim Taegon; laypeople (men and women) – the largest group, demonstrating that the faith was truly a lay-led movement; and children and young people – including the youngest martyr, Peter Yu Tae-chol at age 13. Together, these 103 saints represent the heart of Korea's Catholic identity: a Church founded by laypeople, defended by families, strengthened by foreign missionaries, and made holy by the courage of the young and old alike.

On May 6th 1984, Pope John Paul II canonised 103 Korean martyrs during a ceremony at Yeouido Plaza in Seoul. It was a landmark moment - the first time Korean Catholics were elevated to sainthood and broke the tradition of holding canonizations in Rome, as the Pope visited Korea to celebrate the 200th Anniversary of the Catholic Church in Korea.

124 Korean Blessed Martyrs

The 124 Korean Blessed Martyrs were beatified by Pope Francis on August 16, 2014, in Seoul, South Korea. The event was held at Gwanghwamun Gate in central Seoul. This location was chosen for its historical significance, as it was near where many of the martyrs were killed. An immense crowd of an estimated 800,000 to one million people, including both Catholics and non-Catholics, gathered for the open-air Mass. This was one of the largest beatification ceremonies in the history of the Catholic Church.

It was only the second time a Pope had beatified martyrs outside of Rome (the first also being in Korea, when Pope John Paul II canonized the 103 Korean Martyrs in 1984). Pope Francis's decision to travel to Korea for the ceremony underscored the importance of the Korean Church and its unique history.

The 124 Korean Blessed Martyrs are a group of Catholic martyrs who were persecuted and killed for their faith in Korea during the 18th and 19th centuries, focusing on later persecutions and additional recognized martyrs including more Korean catechists, young children, and faithful laypeople. The group consists of 123 laypeople and one Chinese priest, Father James Zhou Wenmo, who was the first missionary to secretly enter Korea. The large number of laypeople highlights the unique origins of the Korean Catholic Church. The cause for their beatification is named after Paul Yun Ji-chung, who is considered the first martyr of the Korean Church. He and his cousin were beheaded in 1791 for violating Confucian rituals by giving his mother a Catholic burial.

Bl. Paul Yun Ji-chung (복자 윤지충 바오로)

Blessed Paul Yun Ji-chung (1759-1791) was a Korean Catholic layman, considered one of the first Korean martyrs, who was beatified by Pope Francis in 2014.

He and his companion James Kwon Sang-yeon were executed in 1791 for refusing to participate in traditional Confucian ancestral rites for Yun's mother, which was considered a violation of the Joseon dynasty's laws against Catholicism. Paul Yun Ji-chung's execution, along with that of 123 martyrs, marks a significant early period of persecution for the Catholic Church in Korea.

The discovery and confirmation of the remains of Paul Yun Ji-chung highlighted the authenticity of their martyrdom and the deep roots of the Catholic faith in Korea. Pope Francis praised Paul Yun Ji-chung for his call to, "put Christ first," and "for the victory of God's love," in his life and death.

St. Anna Pak Agi (성녀 박아기 안나)

St. Anna Park Agi (1783 - 1839), born in Gangcheon near Han River, was raised in a Catholic household and deeply devoted to God, even though she struggled to memorize prayers. She once said, I may not know God as much as I want, but I can try to love Him with all my heart.

At eighteen, she married fellow Catholic Francis Tae Mun-haeong, and they had five children. Though not poor, Anna lived simply, teaching her family the faith and meditating often on Christ's Passion.

During the 1839 Gihae Persecution, Anna was arrested with her husband and eldest son. Anna remained firm. "Why, for a few days more of life, would you risk eternal death?" she told them. Despite brutal torture and pressure from guards and friends, she refused to deny Christ, "I have decided to preserve my faith and die for it." After three months of beatings and imprisonment, May 24, 1839, at age 57, Anna was beheaded at Seosomun with eight other believers. Her courage, faith, and love for Christ made her not just a mother of five, but a mother of saints. She was canonized in 1984 by Pope John Paul II among the 103 Korean Martyrs.

St. Paul Chong Hasang (성 정하상 바오로)

Saint Paul Chong Hasang (1795–1839) was a foundational lay leader of the early Korean Catholic Church during a time of intense persecution. Born into a noble and devout family, his father Jeong Yak-jong was martyred in the 1801 Sinyu Persecution.

After witnessing the deaths of his father and brother, Chong grew up in a hidden Christian village and committed his life to rebuilding the persecuted Church. In the absence of clergy, he traveled to Beijing nine times between 1816 and 1826, risking his life to seek help from the Catholic Church. In 1825, he boldly petitioned Pope Gregory XVI to ordain native Korean priests. Deeply moved, the Pope called the request “a miracle of the Lord in the East,” and soon after, the Diocese of Joseon was established.

During the training for the priesthood under Bishop Imbert, he was arrested during the 1839 Gihae Persecution. On September 22, 1839, Chong was executed at age 45, along with his mother and sister. Though never ordained, Chong’s work paved the way for Korea’s native clergy, including Saint Andrew Kim Taegon. Canonized in 1984, he is honored as a martyr, scholar, and spiritual father of the Korean Church.

St. Andrew Kim Taegon (성 김대건 안드레아)

St. Andrew Kim Taegon (1821–1846) is the first native Korean Catholic priest and the patron saint of Korea. He was born on August 21, 1821, in Solmoe, Chungcheong Province, into a Catholic family during a time of severe persecution. His father, Ignatius Chejun Kim, was later martyred for the faith in 1839.

He traveled to Macau to study for the priesthood, as seminaries were not allowed in Korea. He was ordained a priest in Shanghai in 1845 by French bishop Jean-Joseph Ferréol. After ordination, he returned to Korea to secretly minister to the growing but persecuted Catholic community, teaching, administering sacraments, and strengthening the faithful.

In 1846, at age 25, he was captured near Seoul while trying to arrange for missionaries to enter Korea. After months of torture, he was executed by beheading on September 16, 1846, at Saenamteo, on the banks of the Han River near Seoul.

He was canonized in 1984 by Pope John Paul II along with 102 other Korean martyrs. His feast day is celebrated on September 20 (together with the Korean Martyrs) and also on September 16 in Korea. He is remembered for his courage, missionary zeal, and dedication to bringing the Catholic faith to Korea despite life-threatening persecution.

Saint Sisters Agnes Kim Hyoju (성녀 김효주 아녜스) & Columba Kim Hyoim (성녀 김효임 골룸바)

Born into a wealthy but anti-Christian household on Bamseom Island, Hyoim (1814-1839) and Hyoju (1816-1839), the sisters faced a father who violently rejected the faith. After his death, their mother and all six children converted to Catholicism. From baptism, the sisters, Columba, Agnes, and Clara, vowed virginity and chose a life of prayer, fasting, and service to the poor, rejecting wealth and marriage.

In 1839, during the Gihae Persecution, the family was betrayed. Agnes was arrested first, and Columba, witnessing her rough treatment, bravely stepped forward to join her. At the Seoul Police Bureau, they boldly defended their faith, refusing to betray fellow Catholics or renounce God. Subjected to brutal tortures including beatings, burning skewers, and sexual humiliation, they endured all in silence and prayer. The sisters refused to betray anyone, including their brother Antonio. Agnes was beheaded on September 3, 1839 at age 23 and Columba followed on September 26 at age 25. Their unwavering faith and defense of both virginity and martyrdom became a powerful witness for the Korean Church. They were canonized in 1984 by Pope John Paul II among the 103 Korean martyrs.

St. Peter Yu Tae-chol (성 유대철 베드로)

Saint Peter Yu Tae-chol (1826-1839) was the son of Saint Augustine Yu Jin-gil, a prominent lay Catholic who helped bring foreign priests to Joseon. Though his father was devout, Peter faced opposition at home from his mother and sister who mocked his faith. Yet he remained respectful and faithful.

During the 1839 Gihae Persecution, 14-year-old Peter, inspired by the martyrs, voluntarily turned himself in. Imprisoned and tortured through fourteen brutal interrogations, he endured over 600 lashes and 45 beatings without wavering. When threatened with fire, he opened his mouth in defiance, stunning his captors. Fellow prisoners marveled at his strength and humility. Fearing public reaction, authorities executed him in secret on October 31, 1839. He was only 13. Peter's martyrdom was a profound witness to his love for Christ. He was beatified in 1925 and canonized in 1984 by Pope John Paul II.

Foreign Martyrs in Korea

Blessed James Zhou Wenmo (복자 주문모 야고보)

The First Missionary Priest & Martyr in Korea

Blessed James Zhou Wenmo (1752 - 1801) is the first missionary priest to enter Korea during the Joseon Dynasty, which had a strict closed-door policy at the time. Born in Suzhou, China in 1752, he lost his parents early in life and were raised by his grandmother. He became a priest as one of the first graduates at Beijing Archdiocese seminary. At that time, Bishop Gouvea in Beijing was planning to send a clergy to Joseon. He chose Fr. Zhou, who had a strong faith and looked similar to Joseon people.

After leaving Beijing in February 1794, Fr. Zhou waited at Yodong area until the Amnok River froze enough to cross across. On the appointed date, he went to a town located on the border between China and Joseon to meet secret envoys sent from Joseon and entered Joseon on the night of December 24. Since then, Fr. Zhou stayed at the house of a faithful Christian so that he could learn Hangul, the Korean alphabets. On Easter Sunday of 1795, he celebrated the first mass on Korean soil.

After his entry was revealed, he escaped to female President Colomba Kang Wan-sook's house and continued to pray in many areas in secrecy. Despite having to remain in hiding, Fr. Zhou oversaw significant growth in the Catholic community, which reportedly grew to about 10,000 members by 1800 after six years.

After the death of the relatively tolerant King Jeongjo in 1800, a new period of intense persecution known as the Shin-yu Persecution began in 1801. Facing threats to his followers, Fr. Zhou turned himself in to the authorities in hopes of ending the persecution. He was beheaded on May 31, 1801, at Saenamteo in Seoul, becoming the first priest to be martyred in Korea. His sacrifice and the thousands of other martyrs during the persecution solidified the foundations of the Korean Catholic Church. Fr. Zhou was beatified along with 123 Korean martyrs by Pope Francis in 2014.

The Foreign Martyrs from Paris Foreign Missions Society

The foreign martyrs in Korea were primarily missionaries from the Paris Foreign Missions Society (MEP) who came to Korea in the late 18th and 19th centuries to serve the growing Catholic community.

Because Korea had very few priests at the time, these missionaries risked arrest, torture, and execution to administer sacraments, teach catechism, and support the faithful.

They provided sacraments, guidance, and education when Korea had almost no native priests. They also helped train catechists, who then led local communities in the absence of clergy. Their martyrdom inspired the Korean faithful and strengthened the lay-led Church, which later produced native priests like St. Andrew Kim Taegon.

St. Laurent-Marie-Joseph Imbert

Saint Laurent Imbert (1796-1839) was born in southern France and raised in a devout Christian family. Resourceful from a young age, he funded his education by making rosaries and later joined the Paris Foreign Missions Society. Ordained in 1819, he set sail for Asia the following year. In 1821, he briefly stopped in Singapore, when he wrote the first Catholic report on the fledgling mission – laying the foundation for the Church there. Imbert ministered in Vietnam and then China for over a decade, enduring hardship and founding a seminary in Sichuan.

In 1837, he was secretly consecrated as a bishop and entered Korea during a wave of persecution. There, he ministered in hiding - preaching, hearing confessions, and forming future priests. Captured in 1839, Bishop Imbert wrote a letter urging two fellow priests to surrender with him: "The Good Shepherd lays down his life for his sheep." Imprisoned, tortured, and beheaded on September 21, 1839, at Saenamteo. Bishop Imbert was canonized in 1984 as one of the 103 Korean Martyrs.

St. Pierre-Philibert Maubant

Saint Pierre Maubant (1803-1839) was born in Normandy and ordained in 1829. He joined the Paris Foreign Missions Society and, after a brief mission in China, was sent to Korea in 1839.

As the first French priest to enter Korea, he ministered in secret and helped baptize more than 2,000 catechumens in a single year. He also selected Andrew Kim Taegon and others as candidates for the priesthood. His tireless and courageous work soon drew attention, and he was arrested and executed by beheading on September 21, 1839 during Gihae Persecution in Seoul.

St. Jacques-Honoré Chastan

Saint Jacques-Honoré Chastan (1803-1839), was born in 1803 in the French Alps, the same year as Saint Pierre Maubant, and was ordained in 1826. He entered the missions in 1827 and, after serving in Thailand and Malaysia, reached Korea in 1836 following a grueling journey.

He ministered with humility and love for the faithful. “We are going to a too great celebration to allow sadness,” he wrote before his arrest, expressing his joy in martyrdom. When persecution escalated, Bishop Imbert surrendered himself to protect the laity and called on Maubant and Chastan to do the same. Trusting in God, they obeyed. The three were tortured and beheaded on September 21, 1839, in Seoul. They were 36 years old. Canonized in 1984 as one of the 103 Korean Martyrs, they are remembered for their fearless love and priestly sacrifice.

Venerable Emil Joseph Kapaun

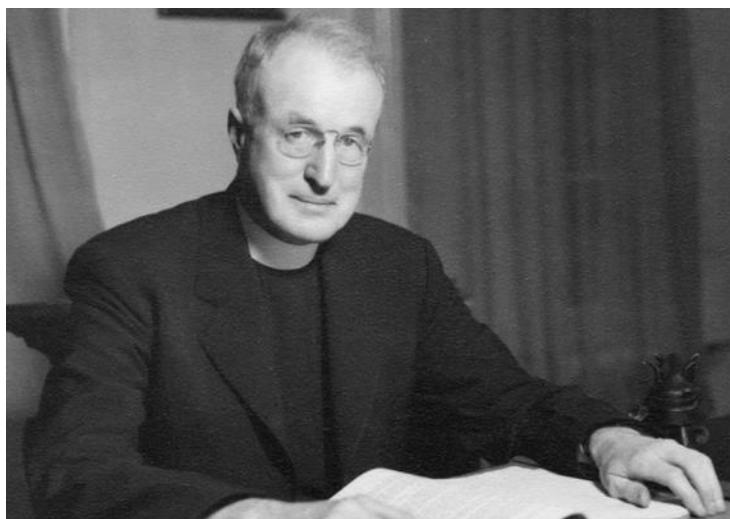

Venerable Emil Kapaun (1916-1951) was born in Pilsen, Kansas, United States and ordained a priest in 1940. He was a Catholic priest martyr and a United States Army chaplain during World War II and the Korean War. He became known for his selflessness, courage, and deep commitment to caring for the physical and spiritual well-being of his troops. Kapaun was a chaplain in the Burma Theater of World War II, then served again as a chaplain with the U.S. Army in Korea, providing spiritual and emotional support to American soldiers. He often celebrated Mass on the battlefield and led secret prayer services to strengthen morale.

During the Korean War, he was captured and died in a prisoner-of-war camp on May 23, 1951. Fr. Emil Joseph Kapaun became a national hero for his extraordinary bravery and compassion as a U.S. Army chaplain during the Korean War. In 2013, he posthumously received the Medal of Honor for his actions in Korea. In 1993, Pope John Paul II declared him a Servant of God, the first stage on the path to canonization, and in 2025, Pope Francis declared him Venerable, the next stage on the path to canonization.

Bishop Patrick James Byrne

Bishop Patrick Byrne (1888-1950) was born in Washington D.C., United States. Ordained as a priest in 1915, he joined the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America (Maryknoll).

He was assigned for missions in Korea and Japan, serving as Prefect Apostolic of Pyongyang from 1927 to 1929, Perfect Apostolic of Kyoto (Japan) from 1937 to 1940, Apostolic Visitor to Korea from 1947 to 1949, and the first Apostolic Delegate to Korea from 1949 to 1950. He was ordained bishop in 1949 at the age of 60 at the dawn of the Cold War, when Korea was dividing between the communist North, backed by China and the Soviet Union, and the South supported by the United States.

In July 1950, after the capture of Seoul by North Korean forces, Bishop Byrne was arrested and put on trial. Though threatened with death, he refused to denounce the United States, the United Nations, or the Vatican. During a four-month forced march, he endured hard weather, starvation, and illness. As pneumonia set in and he realized death was near, he remained steadfast in faith and died in custody in Korea. He declared:

“After the privilege of my priesthood, I regard this privilege of having suffered for Christ with all of you as the greatest of my life.”

First Martyr of the Church

St. Stephen, the first Christian martyr, was chosen as one of the first deacons of the Church. Known for his wisdom and faith, he boldly proclaimed Christ before the Sanhedrin. Accused of blasphemy, he delivered a powerful speech recounting Israel's history and pointing to Jesus as the Messiah. Filled with the Holy Spirit, he saw a vision of Christ standing at the right hand of God. Enraged, the crowd dragged him outside the city and stoned him. As he was dying, Stephen prayed for his persecutors: 'Lord, do not hold this sin against them.' His death marked the beginning of widespread persecution of Christians.

Martyrs from the World Around Us

Mexican Martyrs

St. José Sánchez del Río (1913–1928)

St. José Sánchez del Río was a 14-year-old boy who joined the Cristero movement during the persecution of the Catholic Church in Mexico. Captured by government forces, he refused to renounce his faith. He was tortured and executed, crying out '¡Viva Cristo Rey!' ('Long live Christ the King!'). Canonized by Pope Francis in 2016, he is a patron of youth and a symbol of courage.

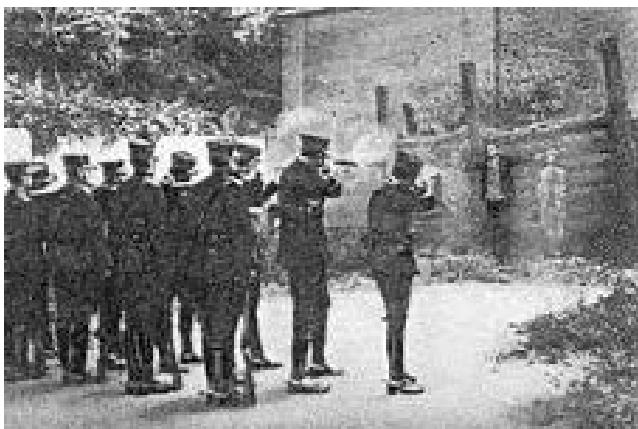

St. Cristóbal Magallanes (1869–1927) & St. Mateo Correa Magallanes (1866–1927)

St. Cristóbal Magallanes was a parish priest and leader who organized seminaries and supported the faith during the Mexican persecution. He was arrested without trial and executed in 1927.

St. Mateo Correa Magallanes was a priest devoted to caring for the poor and prisoners. He was martyred after refusing to break the seal of confession, protecting the sacred trust of his flock. Both men were canonized in 2000 by Pope John Paul II among the 25 Mexican Martyrs.

St. Miguel Agustín Pro (1891–1927)

Viva Cristo Rey!

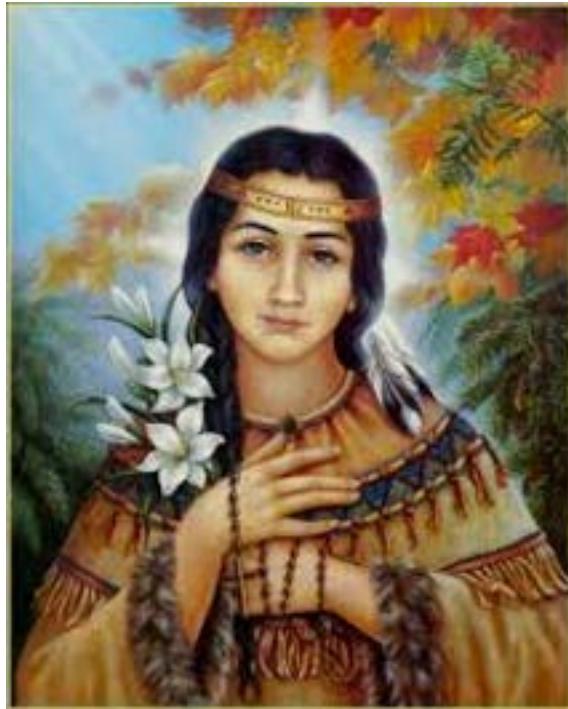

St. Miguel Agustín Pro was a Jesuit priest who carried out a secret ministry during the persecution of the Church in Mexico. He celebrated Mass in homes, heard confessions, and helped the poor while in constant danger. Falsely accused of involvement in a political plot, he was executed by firing squad in 1927. With arms outstretched in the form of a cross, his last words were “Viva Cristo Rey!” His martyrdom was captured in photographs that spread worldwide as testimony of his faith.

North American Martyrs

The North American Martyrs were eight Jesuit missionaries from France who served among the Indigenous peoples of North America during the 17th century. They were killed between 1642 and 1649 in present-day Canada and upstate New York. Their courage, faith, and sacrifice are honored in the Catholic Church, where they were canonized as saints in 1930.

- St. Isaac Jogues (1607–1646): Missionary to the Huron and Iroquois, tortured and martyred in New York.
- St. Jean de Brébeuf (1593–1649): Known for his strength and writings about the Huron language; martyred in Canada.

St. Isaac Jogues

St. Kateri Tekakwitha

The North American Martyrs' sacrifice bore fruit in the spread of Christianity across North America, remembered in shrines such as Midland, Ontario, and Auriesville, New York. They stand as examples of faith, courage, and love of Christ.

Ten years after the martyrdom of St Isaac Jogues, a Mohawk girl named Kateri Tekakwitha was born to a Mohawk chief and a Christian Algonquin mother in New York. Orphaned and left partially blind by smallpox, she began religious instruction and was baptized a Catholic on Easter Sunday 1676. Known as the "Lily of the Mohawks," she died on April 17, 1680, at age twenty-four.

Chinese Martyrs

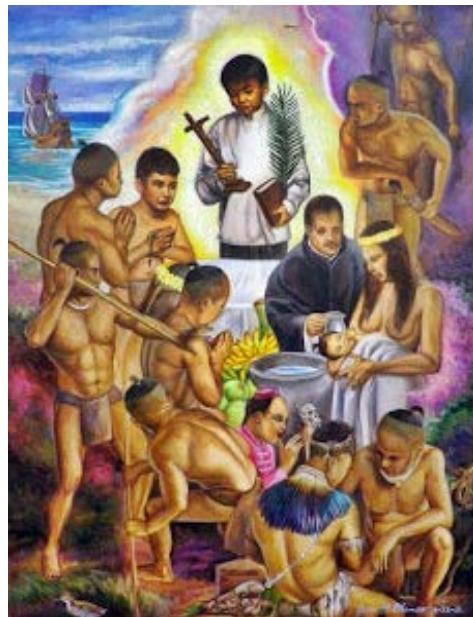

The Chinese Martyrs gave their lives in witness to the Catholic faith during waves of persecution. Notably, St. Augustine Zhao Rong and companions were martyred in the 19th and early 20th centuries. They stand as powerful examples of courage and steadfastness in the face of hostility.

Vietnamese Martyrs

The Vietnamese Martyrs, including St. Andrew Dũng-Lạc and companions, suffered persecution in the 18th and 19th centuries. Their witness reveals the strength of faith and the spread of the Gospel in Vietnam despite severe opposition.

Philippine Martyrs

Catholic Pilgrimage in Seoul

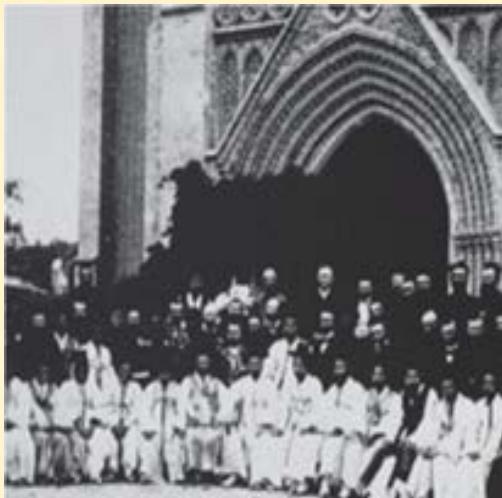

The Significance of the Seoul Pilgrimage Routes

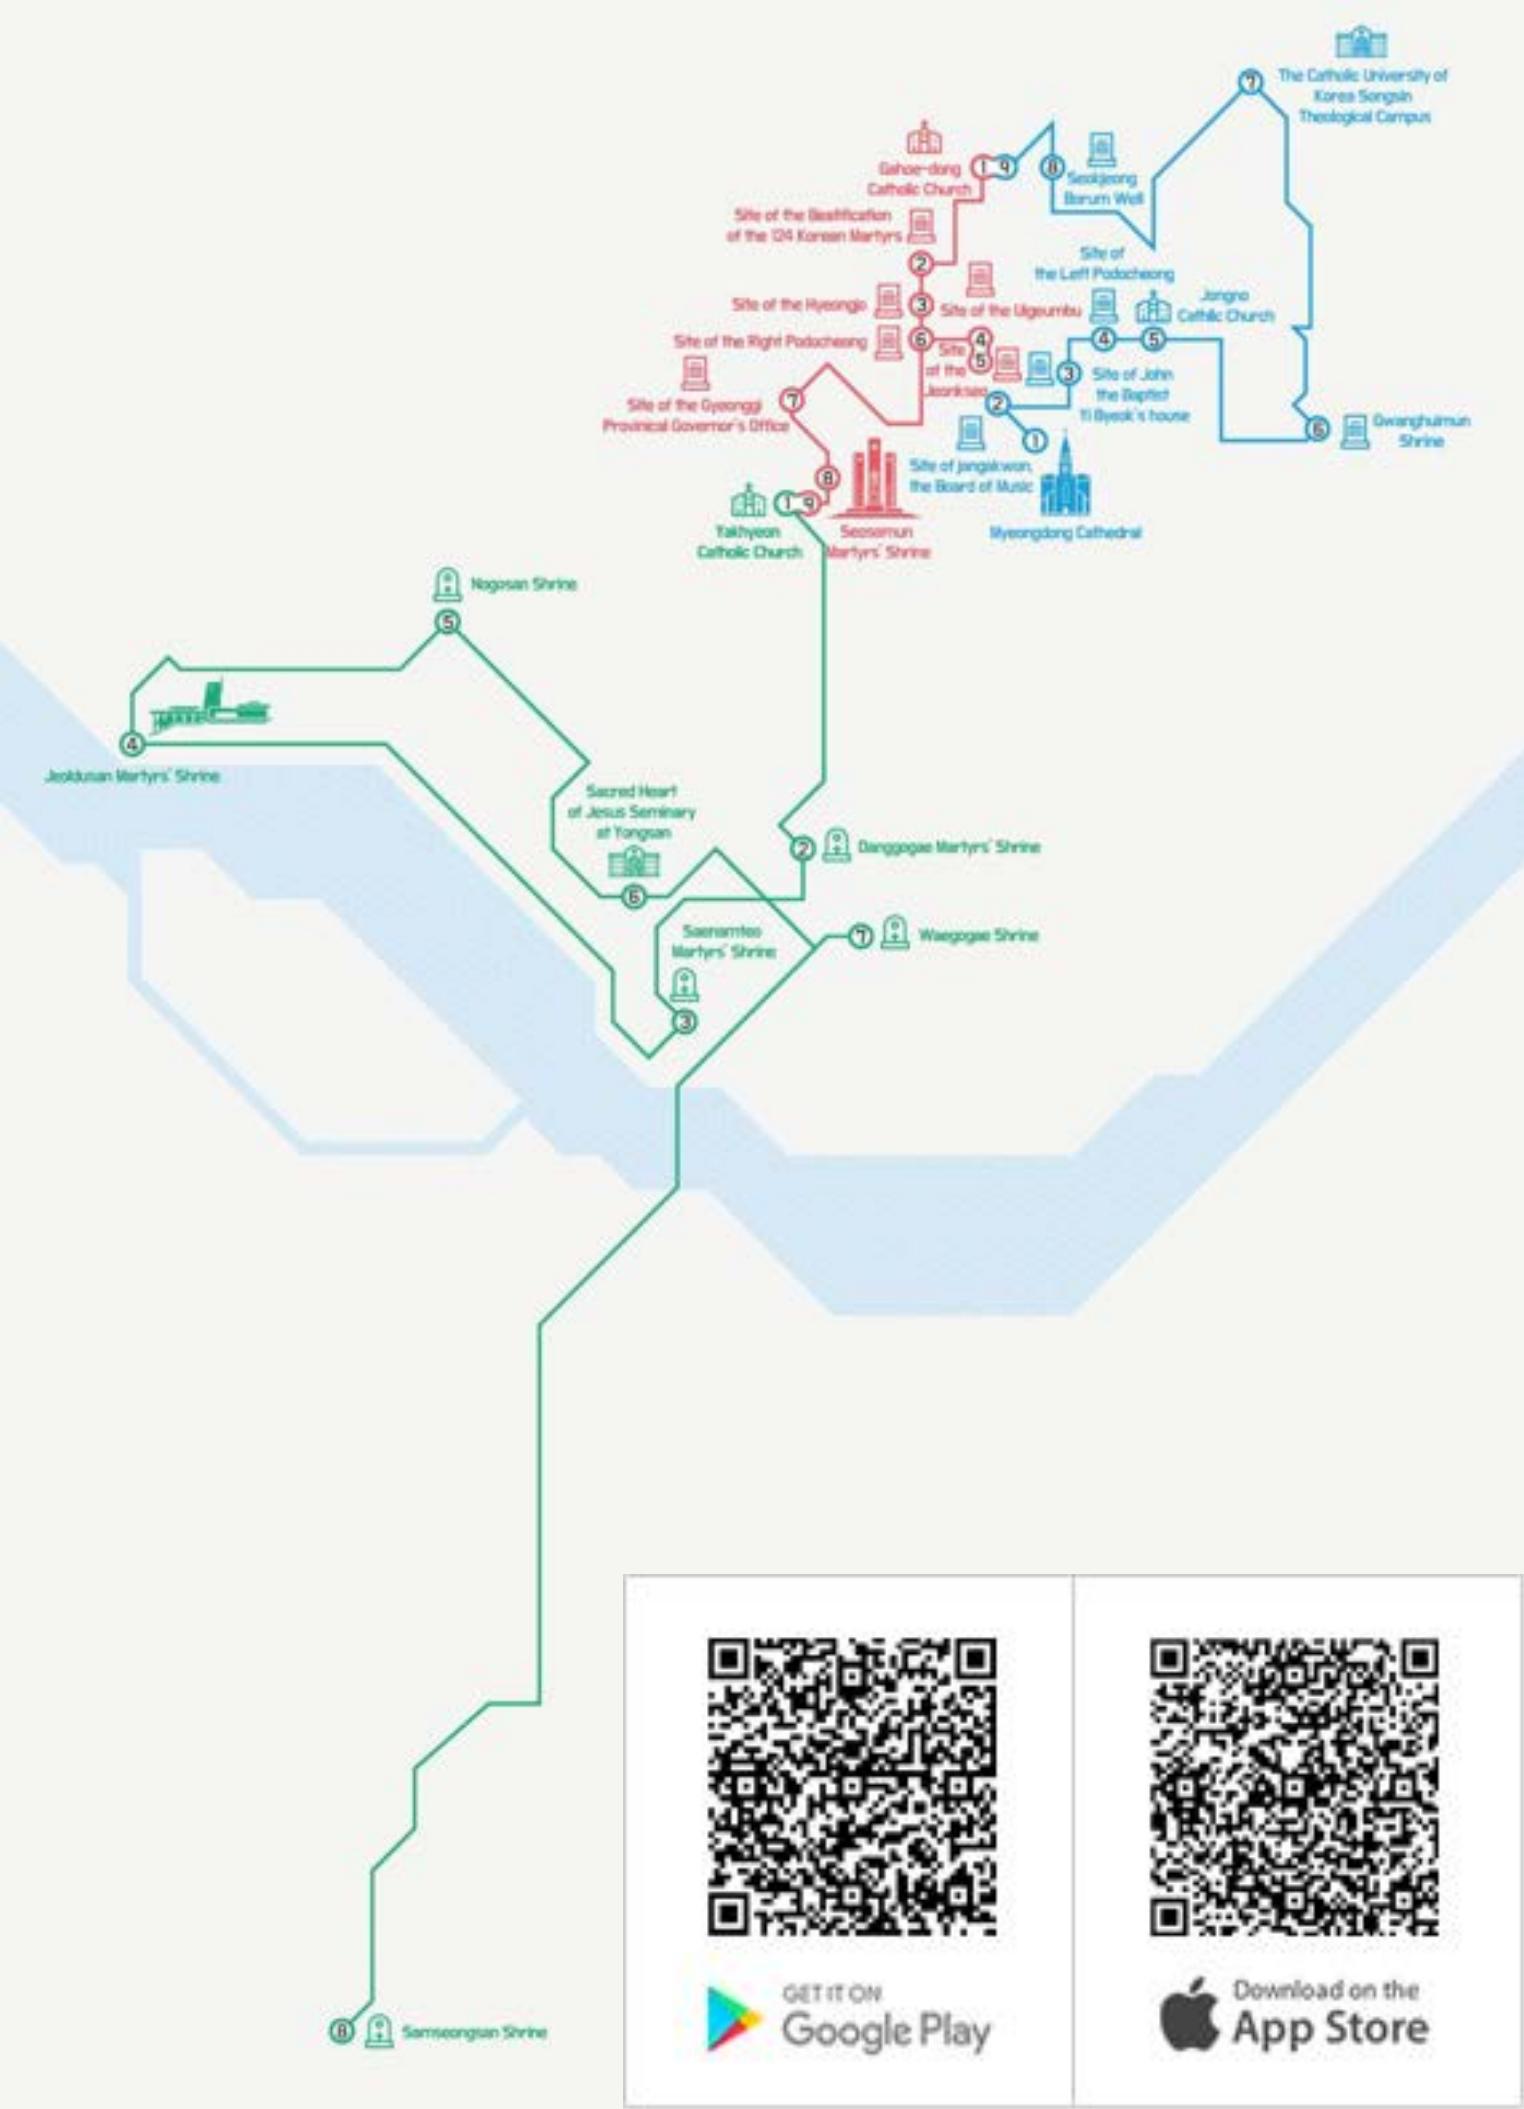

The Seoul Pilgrimage Route

Spanning 44.1 km (27.4 miles) and linking 24 historic sites, the Seoul Pilgrimage Route was named the first International Pilgrimage Site in Asia by the Vatican on September 14, 2018.

The route traces the remarkable beginnings and development of the faith in Korea, from its spontaneous acceptance by a group of scholars to the more than a century of persecutions and martyrdom suffered by the early believers.

First Course: The Good News Road

How was the beginning of Korean Catholic Church? The first course begins at the site of Thomas Kim Beom-woo, the protomartyr of Korea and the site of John Lee Byeok, the venue of the first Catholic baptism.

- Total length : 8.7 km
- Duration : 3 hours 40 minutes

Second Course: The Eternal Life Road

The route is intact with the history of Catholic persecution in Korea and is called the “eternal life road” as it is the route on the ways of martyrdom and of getting eternal lives.

- Total length : 5.9 km
- Duration : 2 hours 30 minutes

Third Course: The Unity Road

The route connects the main martyrs’ shrines in Seoul and is called the “unity road” for hoping that every pilgrim follows the examples of the martyrs and realizes their faith.

- Total length : 29.5 km
- Duration : 8 hours

Seoul Pilgrimage Route 1st Course

The Good News Road

How did the Catholic Church start in Korea? Those who walk the Good News Road can begin to find an answer to this fascinating question. Named the Good News Road, this pilgrimage reminds those who walk its path of the significance of the community of laypersons who voluntarily accepted the Word of the Gospel, an act without precedent in the history of the Church.

This route begins with a visit to the sites of the homes of Thomas Kim Beom-u (Korea's first evangelist) and John the Baptist Yi Byeok's house (the site of the first baptisms in Korea). The journey continues to Seokjeong Boreum Well whose waters Fr. James Zhou Wen-mo, the first priest and missionary to evangelize in Korea, blessed for the celebration of the sacrament of baptism. The pilgrim is invited to spend time in Gahoe-dong Catholic Church in Gye-dong. The church is built in the area where Fr. Zhou ministered and provides an opportunity to quietly meditate on both the life and martyrdom of Fr. Zhou and the early believers to whom he ministered.

Seoul Pilgrimage Route 2nd Course

The Eternal Life Road

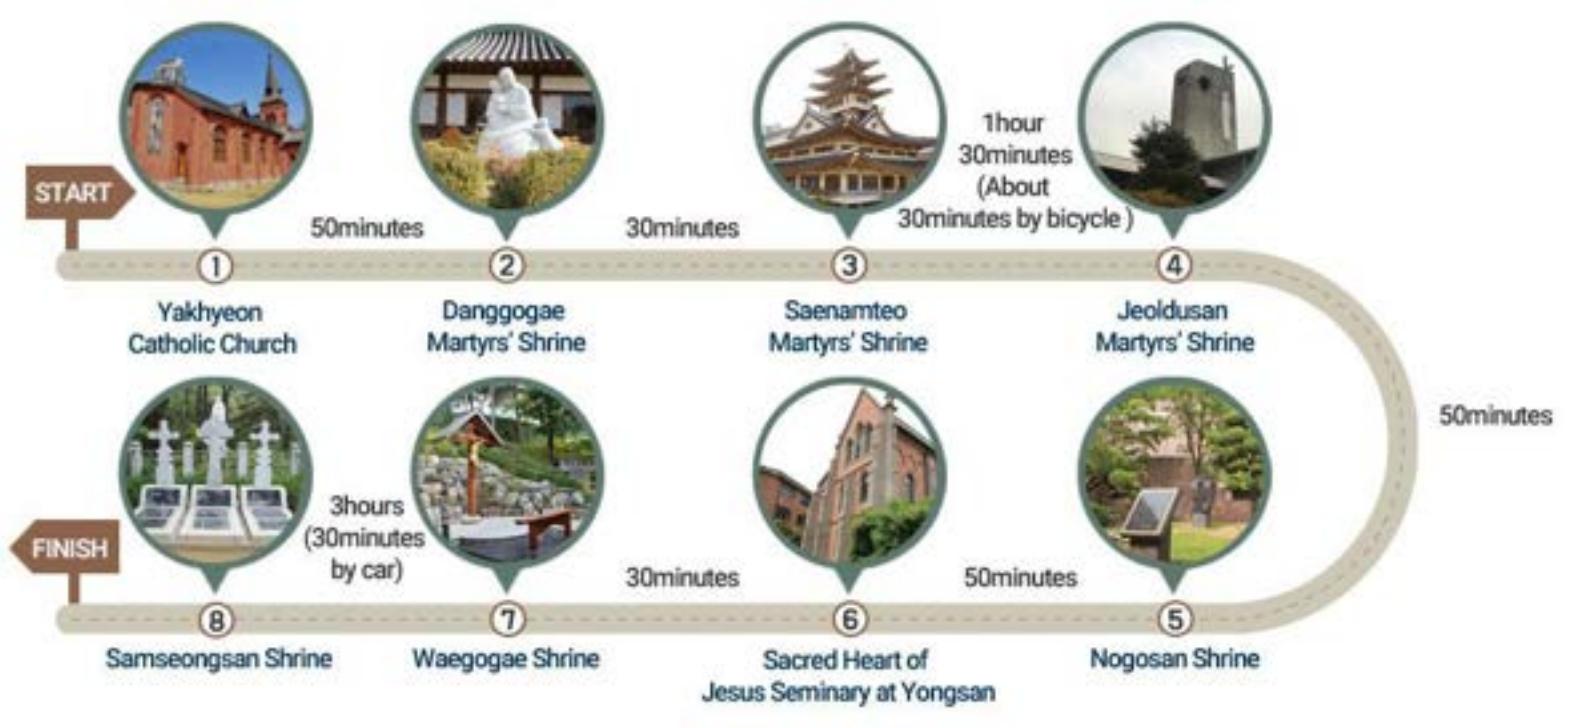

During the Joseon Dynasty, Catholicism was regarded as an evil practice for prioritizing the word of God over the commands of the king, and a series of Catholic persecutions ensued. The Eternal Life Road, which retains the traces of the history of these persecutions, includes the historically significant Seosomun Martyrs' Site where the largest number of Catholic believers were executed by beheading. Also found along the road are the Site of Hyeongjo, the Site of the Right Podocheong, and the Site of the Gyeonggi Provincial Governor's Office.

Martyrdom is the ultimate testimony to one's faith, and many Catholic believers, in seeking the noble truth, sacrificed their lives, steadfast in their hope and belief in the 'eternal life' offered by Jesus Christ. Although the forefathers of faith died as martyrs, they were also on a journey to attaining everlasting life and thus this route has been named the Eternal Life Road.

The sites are no longer in their former appearance, yet they will encourage pilgrims to reflect on both the persecution of Catholicism, which occurred on this very soil, as well as the universal values sought by the martyrs. Pilgrims, as they follow in the footsteps of those who put their faith above their own lives, are naturally challenged to ponder what is of most value in their lives.

Seoul Pilgrimage Route 3rd Course

The Unity Road

This route connecting some of the most iconic martyrs' shrines in Seoul has been named the Unity Road to encourage believers to follow the example set by the martyrs and uphold the will of God.

It takes pilgrims to Danggogae Martyrs' Shrine, which produced the third largest number of martyred saints in Korea, and Saenamteo Martyrs' Shrine, where Father James Zhou Wen-mo, the first foreign missionary to Korea, and St Andrew Kim Tae-gon, the first-ever Korean priest, died as martyrs. Past the latter site, the Hangang River flows, and along the riverside there is Jeoldusan Martyrs' Shrine which receives endless streams of pilgrims from across the country and the world. The place was named, Jeoldusan, meaning a 'place where Catholic believers were beheaded,' and enshrined in the crypt of the chapel are the remains of 27 martyred saints and one unnamed martyr.

The pilgrimage continues past Waegogae Shrine where 10 martyrs remained buried for decades, and concludes at Samseongsan Shrine. The pilgrim is invited to meditate on their own faith and what it means to follow in the footsteps of the martyrs and imitate their faith.

3 Most Significant Seoul Pilgrimage Sites

Myeongdong Cathedral

Myeongdong Cathedral is the "Mother Church," the spiritual and physical heart of the Catholic Church in Korea. While it was not a site of persecution itself, it holds immense historical and symbolic value. It was the first brick church in Korea, and its construction in the late 19th century symbolized the growing acceptance and establishment of Catholicism in the country. In the 20th century, the cathedral became a focal point for South Korea's pro-democracy movement in the 1970s and 1980s, serving as a sanctuary for student activists and a site of protest against military dictatorships. It has also become the final resting place for the relics of many Korean martyrs.

Jeoldusan Martyrs' Shrine

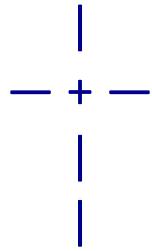

Jeoldusan, which literally means "Beheading Mountain," is a sacred place of martyrdom. It is a powerful reminder of the extreme violence of the Byeong-in Persecution of 1866. This was one of the largest and most intense persecutions of Catholics in Korean history. Thousands of Catholics were executed here, often by decapitation, and their bodies were thrown into the Han River. The shrine, which includes a museum and a church, was built to commemorate the 100th anniversary of this persecution and to honor the spirit of the martyrs.

Saenamteo Martyrs' Shrine

Located by the Han River, this shrine stands on the site where many Catholics - priests and laypeople including Blessed James Zhou Wenmo in 1801, St. Paul Chong Hasang in 1839, St. Andrew Kim Taegon in 1846 and companions - were executed across multiple persecutions in 1801, 1839, 1846, and 1866. Inside the parish is a martyrs' shrine which houses relics of nine Korean martyrs. Remarkably, this is also where 103 martyrs were canonized by Pope John Paul II in 1984.

Flourishing South Korean Catholic Church

According to the Catholic Bishops' Conference of Korea, the modern Korean Catholic Church is marked by significant numerical and institutional growth.

58,000+ baptisms recorded in 2024, marking a 13.7% increase from the previous year, driven largely by adult converts and family baptisms

The total number of Catholics in Korea reached nearly 6 million, about 11.4% of the national population as of 2024 and a 12,000% increase in 50 years

Clergy total: 5,751
(5,578 Korean priests, 131 foreign clergy, 40 bishops, 2 cardinals)

Key Factors that Strengthened Catholicism in Korea

Education, Healthcare and Charity Initiatives

Catholic missionaries and Korean clergy built schools, universities, seminaries, hospitals, and orphanages that provided modern education and medical care while serving the poor. These efforts made the church a trusted institution for both spiritual and practical needs, raising its social standing and influence.

Political Involvement

Catholic clergy and lay leaders courageously opposed authoritarian regimes and human rights abuses and supported democracy movements. This commitment aligned the church with the Korean people's struggles, giving Catholicism a reputation as a defender of justice and freedom.

Sense of Community

Catholic parishes became more than worship spaces. They served as social hubs, offering support networks for converts and marginalized groups. The church fostered a strong lay movement, with small faith groups, youth associations, and volunteer organizations. This sense of belonging gave members both spiritual nourishment and social solidarity, helping Catholicism take root in Korean culture.

Vatican II Influence

The reforms of the Second Vatican Council (1962-1965) encouraged active lay participation, use of the Korean language in worship, and openness to local traditions. These changes empowered Korean Catholics to link faith with social justice, democracy, and cultural identity.

Persecuted North Korean Catholic Church

During the Korean War, communist troops persecuted missionaries, foreign religious, and Korean Christians, pursuing them to the south. In North Korea, all monasteries and churches were destroyed. Monks and priests who could not flee to the south were sentenced to death.

Today, the Church in North Korea has neither clergy nor religious services. However, according to official data, there are approximately 4,000 North Korean Catholics belonging to the Korean Catholic Association, controlled by the communist regime. This association, which is not recognized by the Vatican, has only one church in the country, in Changchun, which is considered window dressing by the regime.

Bishop Francis Hong Yong-ho

Francis Hong Yong-ho (1906-2013), appointed the first Bishop of Pyongyang in 1944, worked to rebuild the Church after Japanese rule but was arrested by North Korean authorities in 1949, accused as an “enemy of the people.” He disappeared without trial or trace, becoming a symbol of courage and faith. In 2014, the Vatican recognized him as a Servant of God, the first step toward sainthood.

He represents the “Hidden Martyrs of the North” - priests, religious, and lay leaders who suffered persecution in North Korea from 1945 through the Korean War. Churches were destroyed, and the Catholic hierarchy was silenced. Among them was Msgr. Patrick Chang, Apostolic Administrator of Hamhung (disappeared in 1950), Fr. Peter Ryang (vanished during the purges), and countless unnamed catechists and lay leaders who endured imprisonment or death rather than renounce their faith.

Cardinal Stephen Kim Sou-hwan

The Moral Leader of the Nation

The youngest cardinal in the world in 1969, Stephen Kim Sou-hwan (1922-2009) used his influence not for power, but for protection. During Korea's pro-democracy protests, he opened Myeongdong Cathedral to students fleeing police brutality. "Step over me first if you must take them." - Cardinal Kim. His courage became a spiritual refuge. He led not just the Church, but the nation with love, clarity, and moral strength. He remains a symbol of mercy and truth.

Advocate of Democracy

Bishop Daniel Ji Hak-sun
(the middle)

Msgr. Pius Cho Chul-hyun

Bishop Daniel Ji Hak-sun (1921- 1993) was a bishop of the diocese of Wonju and stood boldly against the Park Chung-hee regime. He was associated with Kim Chi-ha, a poet and social activist, and was arrested in 1974 over allegations of providing financial support to opponents of Park's government and sentenced to death. He was sympathetic to the April Revolution and was a leader of the urban poor and supported nonviolent resistance to the regime. "The Church cannot be neutral when the people suffer." - Bishop Ji. In the shadows of oppression, he became a voice for human dignity and hope, igniting the conscience of a nation.

Msgr. Pius Cho Chul-hyun (1938-2016) was a distinguished Catholic priest enduring efforts toward democracy and social justice. During the Gwangju Uprising, he volunteered as a Citizens' Settlement Committee member after witnessing citizens being shot. He was subsequently arrested by the military regime and imprisoned alongside future president Kim Dae-jung. He became the first to publicly testify about helicopter gunfire used by the martial law forces during the uprising, beginning in a 1989 documentary and later at the national parliamentary hearings for truth-seeking. He declared, "The Church must be the voice of the voiceless."

Global Missionaries of the Korean Catholic Church

From Recipient to Sender

1,000 Korean Missionaries in 64 Countries

Korea has emerged as a vibrant source of Catholic missionary outreach. Nearly 1,000 Korean missionaries are working across 64 countries - more than a quarter of them priests, and the majority composed of religious sisters. From the rural provinces of Zambia to the cities of Vietnam and the highlands of Peru, Korean Catholicism is expanding its reach with quiet persistence. Vietnam leads the list with 129 Korean missionaries, followed by the Philippines, Zambia, Japan, Indonesia, and China - countries where Korean missionaries often serve in difficult pastoral or educational settings.

Motivations for Mission:

The motivation for this global mission is deeply rooted in the history of Korean Catholicism. The church's origins, which began with lay people spreading the faith without a foreign clergy, have instilled a strong sense of personal responsibility for evangelization. This historical context fosters a culture of active discipleship and mission.

Global Reputation:

Korean missionaries are recognized for their discipline, strong community spirit, and willingness to serve in difficult places.

Fr. John Lee Tae-seok

Don Bosco (St. John Bosco) of Tonj

Father John Lee Tae-seok (1962–2010) was a Korean Catholic priest, doctor, and Salesian missionary who dedicated his life to serving the poor in Tonj, South Sudan. The Crisis of the Current Catholic Church and the Crisis of Life in Korea

Loss of Direction After Democratization

Failure in Pro-Life Advocacy

Urgent call to Enact Laws Protecting Life

August 17, 2025 | Benedict Kwangho Lee

Having seen Democratic Party lawmakers introduce “unlimited abortion” bills twice, and with a new government now moving to legalize abortion pills, I have come to realize that this is not a problem that can be solved simply by blaming the ruling party or the administration.

The deeper problem is that not a single lawmaker in our country has the will to draft and propose laws that protect life.

In the United States, Catholic churches systematically conduct pro-life education and advocacy. They apply strong pressure on politicians and even train them to craft pro-life legislation. In Korea, however, religious groups rarely do this. At most, they issue declarations and statements, but actual, effective education and organized movements are virtually absent.

This reveals the limitations of Korean Catholicism. It is true that in the 1970s and 1980s, the Church made significant contributions to democratization. But after institutional democracy was achieved in the 1990s, the Church seems to have lost its sense of mission. It has, in a biblical sense, lost its saltiness.

Driven by the inertia of its 1970s–80s democratization activism, the Catholic Church continues to support the Democratic Party and the progressive camp. Yet since the 2000s, these groups have pushed abortion legalization and LGBT and sexual-identity movements—and many Catholics, including some clergy and religious, have stood with them and supported these actions almost without question.

The Church may support the Democratic Party insofar as it pursues social justice. But when that same party advances anti-life policies—such as repealing abortion laws or pushing “unlimited abortion”—the Church must draw a clear line and issue strong warnings. Instead, it often appears more like a follower, or even a subordinate unit, of the party. This is deeply frustrating.

History shows us what true leadership looks like. On December 12, 1979, Cardinal Kim Sou-hwan openly confronted General Chun Doo-hwan, remarking that the situation felt like a Western movie in which the first to shoot wins. Even Chun, an all-powerful dictator, feared the Cardinal. During the industrialization era, Cardinal Kim admonished President Park Chung-hee: “When resources enter a factory, they come out as products. But when human beings go in, they come out as scrap.”

Today, however, the Church no longer fulfills—or perhaps refuses to fulfill—this leadership role.

Since the 2000s, the most marginalized and persecuted group in society has been the unborn. Yet the Church has largely failed to recognize this. Had it defended life as vigorously as it once resisted dictatorship, Korea would not face this tragic state of affairs.

Because the Church has failed to be salt and light, society has decayed. People wander in darkness, unaware that they are joyfully walking down the path of national extinction. It is a truly bleak reality.

In 2025, the Church must bear this social burden and address the nation’s highest leaders: “For over fifty years, nation-led and nation-neglected mass abortions have brought Korea to the brink of national extinction. It is imperative to enact laws and policies to protect life, as is done in other developed nations. The responsibilities of both the nation and men regarding pregnancy must be legally established.”

"The next World Youth Day will take place in Asia... in Seoul, South Korea!"

"Thus, from the western border of Europe it will move to the Far East. This is a marvellous sign of the Church's universality and of the dream of unity to which you bear witness!"

Theme

“Take courage!
I have overcome the world.”
(John 16:33)

Rejoicing in hope (38th WYD theme) and never growing weary (39th WYD theme), become a witness to the Christ you have encountered (40th WYD theme) and gather your courage (41st WYD theme) to embark on the pilgrimage to Seoul!

Pope Francis chose John 16:33 as the theme for World Youth Day Seoul 2027. This verse, spoken by Jesus to his disciples at the Last Supper, reminds us of the irrevocable truth that despite the challenges of the world, Christ has already conquered fear, sin, and death. It is a call to hope and courage rooted in faith in the resurrection—not a passive optimism, but a bold confidence grounded in the living presence of Christ.

Young people across the globe today are confronted with a wide range of challenges, including conflicts, economic hardship, and an uncertain future. Thankfully, at WYD Seoul 2027, they can receive the joy of becoming the “salt of the earth and the light of the world.” Through their encounters with one another they will experience unconditional love, thereby gaining the strength to be sent back out into the world as “pilgrims of hope” and “courageous missionaries,” boldly putting into practice the joy of the Gospel they have discovered.

Challenges in Korea Society

Super-Aged Society & Extremely Low Birth Rate

Korea has the world's lowest fertility rate as 0.75 in 2024, which is causing a rapid population decline and an aging society. By 2045, it is projected to have the world's oldest population, with a significant portion of the population over 65. The shrinking working-age population will put a huge strain on the economy, and the pension and healthcare systems, as there will be fewer workers to support a growing number of retirees. The high cost of living, including housing and private education, along with a poor work-life balance and traditional gender norms, are all major factors contributing to the low birth rate.

Economic Inequality

Despite Korea's advanced economy, wealth distribution remains highly uneven. Many seniors struggle with poverty because of inadequate retirement savings and limited social protections, forcing them into low-paying or insecure work. Younger generations also face challenges such as high housing prices, heavy debt, and unstable job markets. This widening gap across age groups contributes to intergenerational tension and a sense of social unfairness.

Mental Health Crisis & High Suicide Rates

Korea consistently reports one of the highest suicide rates among developed nations. Extreme academic pressure, workplace stress, and cultural stigma around seeking help all contribute to the mental health crisis. Young people are burdened by competition and future uncertainty, while the elderly often suffer from loneliness and economic hardship. Although awareness is growing, mental health resources and public support systems remain underdeveloped.

Political and Social Divisions

Political polarization is a significant issue, with deep ideological divides. Recent political turmoil, including the impeachment of a former president in 2025, highlights ongoing issues with government corruption and instability. Gender-based conflicts are also a chronic problem, with a large gender wage gap and a rise in digital sex crimes. The government's use of criminal defamation laws and the National Security Law has also raised concerns about freedom of the press and expression.

Not Love, Not Friendship - It's Jeong!
